Chemoil announces entry into aviation fuel market

7th September 2011

Chemoil Energy Limited has announced that it will be expanding into the supply of aviation fuel through its newly formed division, Chemoil Aviation.

The division became effective September 1, 2011.

Its first marketing and supply office will be located in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Chemoil CEO Tom Reilly stated: "Our entry into this global 65 billion gallon a year market offers great growth potential."

Chemoil told Bunkerworld that initially the primary focus will be selling aviation fuel to midsize commercial including passenger, cargo and charter operators as well as corporate aviation.

Reilly added that the expansion into jet fuel was consistent with its existing strategy and that it would allow Chemoil to leverage its existing business platform as well as its extensive marketing and supply expertise to further diversify the company and expand its presence in the global downstream fuel marketplace.

The move is in line with competitor fuel companies such as World Fuel Services, a global leader in the downstream marketing and financing of aviation, marine and land fuel products and related services.
